

Eschaton-a-Go-Go

Comic Script (draft) by Ginger Mayerson

Art by Molly Kiely (coming soon)

PART I:

Three large panels

Panel 1, 2 or 3 (I'll leave it up to you)

Very long shot of ancient Lake Baikal and the vastness of Siberian nature around it. You can pick the season; I hear ancient Siberia had some very nice scenery.

Leave space for a title, but somewhere on the panel put: "51°29N 103°41'E"

Four tiny figures are walking out of the lake.

Dialogue:

2nd figure (Sarma): "Why are we doing this again?"

1st figure (Angara): "Because it will be fun!"

3rd figure (Selenga): "Yeah, Lake Spirits on dry land. That's good."

4th figure, looking back at the lake (Turka): "Well, the lake demons don't seem sorry to see us go."

Little figures in the lake, shaking their fists and making rude gestures at them.

Panel 1, 2 or 3 (I'll leave it up to you)

Leave space for the title, but put "34°N, 118°W" somewhere on the panel.

Several boringly dressed women with large guns defending a bullet pitted library building ("Library" is on the building) in a debris strewn space in front of it.

Dialogue:

Diana Martin: "Why are we doing this again?"

Rhea Reyes: "For truth, justice and the American Way!"